

BAUSCH FOR CORONER, TAMMANY'S NOMINEE.

Comparatively Little Opposition to His Candidacy at the County Convention.

Woful Lack of Schoolhouses Attracted Much Attention from the Delegates.

Cleveland and His Administration Attacked in an Address by ex-Judge Curtis.

FINANCIAL CONDITION OF THE CITY.

This Was Referred to as a "Shameful and Degrading Spectacle" by Justice Goldfogle—Raines Law Denounced.

FOR CORONER—JACOB I. BAUSCH. This nomination was made by the Tammany Hall County Convention last night.

The woful lack of school houses to which the Journal has directed public notice, received some attention from the convention.

Resolved that the deterioration of the present city administration, in failing to provide accommodations for thousands of school children, be condemned by this convention.

To consider the merits of the candidates for the nomination whose claims were being pushed, the Executive Committee met this afternoon. Six men were named.

No conclusion was reached, but a committee of nine, comprising John C. Sheehan, William Dalton, Charles Wolke, Senator Bernard P. Martin, Register Schorer, County Clerk Purry, James P. Keating, J. J. Scully and ex-Judge Andrew J. White was appointed to decide who should be the candidate and report back to the Executive Committee just before the assembling of the convention.

Civil Justice Henry M. Goldfogle was permanent chairman. In his address he said: "This is a very important time in the history of our Republic, and Tammany Hall was never known to falter when its services were needed."

"What a shameful, degrading spectacle it is that this great city could sell its bonds to build schoolhouses for the education of our children. This is a condition that must be remedied."

The resolutions, offered by ex-Judge M. Curtis, declare for the double standard of value, denounce attempts to intimidate voters and oppose the times liquor tax law.

Mr. Bausch, who lives at No. 88 Cannon street and is a wood carver, was born in this city thirty years ago. He was educated in the public schools, was president of the Building Trades Conference, was secretary of the Board of Delegates of the Building Trades, and is secretary of the Central Labor Union.

Those Who Act Promptly Can Still Secure One of Those Special Encyclopedic Dictionary Sets.

The New York Newspaper Syndicate, which lately distributed among readers many thousands of sets of the above great work at a very low introductory price, are now closing out at a merely nominal figure a few of these sets which have become slightly marred in the course of the distribution.

In packing, unpacking and handling the covers of some of the volumes have been rubbed a little—so little, indeed, that few purchasers, even at the regular price of $42, would be able to discover any cause for complaint either regarding appearance or condition.

As a matter of fact, these special sets are just as good as new for all practical purposes, and they are being sold only with an absolutely perfect forty-two dollar set that had seen a few days' usage in home library at office.

The price which the Syndicate has arranged for one of these special sets is surely attractive to any one earnestly desiring to own a strictly high-class reference work at a trifling cost.

The four volumes are sent to any address on payment of only $1, and if on examination they are not found to be exactly what is returned within a week, which is allowed for examination, and the money will be refunded, or if the work is retained the small balance is payable in easy monthly amounts.

This is certainly a rare opportunity for any person to whom even the former low introductory price may have seemed too high.

Keep Your Eye Skinned for the Sunday Journal.

A guest of an uptown boarding-house has a small table in the darkest corner of the dining room. The other morning was dark and rainy when he got down for breakfast. He couldn't see his coffee, because it was black and just the shade of the fishy pocket of the room corner in which his little mushroom-like table stood.

And he was again lost in darkness whose fishy quality could never live in the scintillating surf of light that surges and booms in the columns of the New York Journal.

Yes, you are quite right, gentle Glycerina, we didn't mean the Evening Edition of the New York Journal, but the Sunday Journal, although the Evening Edition is also a dispenser of darkness that would cause the average day man to imagine that it came out of the east on the horse ear of Phœbus.

To begin the list of features, there is no less a dignitary than Skippy the Degenerate, what he degenerated from and how he came to degenerate. Also how Professor Starr's three years' study of this depraved youth happened to end in disaster, with a detailed description of the disaster, and an analysis of the moral imbecile who is a perfect specimen of Professor Lombroso's famous type of the criminal that is born, not made.

People who are in no immediate danger of having millions thrust rudely upon them, and who, albeit, are not averse to having the roof of all evil growing luxuriantly in their back yards, would do well to turn to page 47 of the Sunday Journal and learn how Anthony Bovee was, so to speak, reincarnated from pauperism to millionarism in the brief period of one million, which reduces the record some three or four seconds, if not more. It is a financial eye opener and no mistake!

The woman who ate and subsisted on her own hair for years must have had a peculiar appreciation of the big, considered separately and apart from the said disc of boarding house butter. How the hair grew with sufficient rapidity to keep within four lengths of her appetite is a question that the Sunday Journal answers with a simplicity and directness which is the incarnation of the lucidity of verbal perfection.

"The Biggest Ship Ever Built" and "The Queen of England's First Yacht" will delight all nautical characters from Nantucket whalers to the message vitamins of the local Turkish bards. "The Whites-it from the Tropics" will be interesting to pisciculturists, although most of the intelligent lady will regard its pug face and its phylaxery and conclude that it is the Irish Alterman of the sea.

Every man may wish why woman should cross their "ts," but it is not likely that the average man doesn't know why women should not cross their legs, at home or abroad. This is an intensely interesting article which every woman with well-rounded legs will read with profit. All people who are fond of that branch of pictorial art known under the general name of tattooing will not fail to overcome with amazement at the picture of the staminate beauty who is, so to speak, at once a human map and a breathing Vatican. She is attired entirely in tattoo marks, because if she had on the ordinary habiliments of sweet femininity it would be impossible to see the tattoo marks.

"The Distressing Complaint of a Pretty Model," a lamentation of lugeria and a full history of what she did and how it turned out to be a golden sorrow, jeweled with tears as large as two-grain quinine pills, is another feature of the Sunday Journal that no one can afford to miss, any more than they can Alva Dale's remedy for the theatre hit.

Gertrude Atherton's general indictment of the American man, at whom she goes without gloves that glide up beyond the shoulders and are held in place by a collar button, is great. She tells how American men make love to women they never saw before, and of whose wealth they are in ignorance. In the latter matter they are the opposite of the English men, who only make love after they have investigated the father's standing at the Mercantile Agency.

"How to Get Motion from Sound" is an article which tells you how the baby's crying rocks the cradle, and how an accordion solo can be made to disintegrate and be reduced to hash for the maternal mind. Also how a man when snoring at night may utilize that usually wasted energy into creasing his trousers for the morrow.

The Sunday Journal also tells of $100,000,000 worth of forthcoming babies, with portraits of the prospective mothers. The said mothers are all Americans, and some of them have titles which may be read clear. The joyful tidings are in the air where soon there will be music to beat the band—music that will be heard at Newport and the Isle of Wight and the Highlands of Scotland next Summer.

But this has nothing to do with the peanut monopoly, which will be read of with interest by all purchasers of the Sunday Journal who were brought up on the American circus and minstrel show long before the peanut lost caste as a solid food to be rounded into Italian olive oil.

Real American dragons and monsters that lived five millions of years ago and were the pets and playmates of many of our most charming burlesque beauties, will give the layman some idea of what a man with a bonobal liver sees when he has been drinking, not wisely, but too much. The Jumping Lancelots is the copyrighted title of a monster with a flaming countenance that would stop a railroad train or a salary in less time than it takes a bookkeeper to line up against a piece of pie. Any sane man would prefer meet this prehistoric, if not pre-Raphaelite, monster in the columns of the Sunday Journal than in an open field, although with all its ferocity it is not so ugly as the ugliest Englishman whose portrait appears on the same page. He can see the Jumping Lancelots, but he can't see the bluff of the $5,000 bull dog whose legs are so far apart that he is a brand gauge dog.

It is harder than both of these animals together with a hedge fence thrown in. His name is Sir Richard Pymple, and he ought to have vines and roses running all over him to cover the spots that need pointing up and upholstering.

The downfall of Spain, which was once the greatest empire on earth, will be of great interest at the present time. How it came down off its perch of greatness, and the prospect of its coming down again to show that it hasn't forgotten how the trick is done, will be relished by all Cuban sympathizers.

To know how it feels to fall about a half mile out of a balloon, read the account of the experiences of Charles Walcott and Frank Stevens in the Sunday Journal. You can do this without being reduced to home fertilizer, as these aeromats would most likely have been if they had fallen a much greater distance.

Hovels that cannot be bought for millions will grow so close to you of certain kind of torment that rich men have to suffer in silence. You may not own a lion, but if you ever should what would you do if it should be thumped on the point of the jaw by a large, well-developed toothache? You don't know, eh? Of course you don't! But read the Sunday Journal and you will know. You will also know how a woman boxed all France and why she did it. You will also learn why women are more disgusting than men, why fish yawn, and why a spider becomes loveless when a girl passes his web.

The largest heart in a human being, and the rate at which it is growing will interest medical men, who will enjoy the curious cardiac map supplied to make the meaning of the text clear to the average reader. Nym Crinkle's estimate of Brander Matthews and his literary confederates will be enjoyed by all men of letters, and also by the intelligent reading public. The great Bronte revival is treated at great length by one who knows whereof he writes. This article is illustrated by the home of the Brontës and the portraits of the three famous sisters and their brother and father.

Don't fail to order the Sunday Journal to-day. Don't fail to read it to-morrow. The foregoing articles are only a small part of it. It's the largest, the greatest and the up-to-date of all the Sunday papers, and the price is three cents.

Special Notices. When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria. When she became a Child, she cried for Castoria. When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria. When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

CUSTOMS MYSTERY ENDED.

Etchings and Plates Seized in April Last Bought in by the Importers.

Four cases containing valuable etchings, engravings and stereotyped plates, seized by the customs authorities for undervaluation on April 13, were sold by auction at noon yesterday, in room No. 55 of the Post Office building.

The cases came on the North German liner Lahn. There was a good deal of mystery about the plates, which were imported by Fensel, Bruckner & Lohmeier, No. 20 Exchange place, and were said to be for a work covering the career of Prince Otto von Bismarck, written by Arthur Minei, a well-known German writer.

Representatives of the leading magazines attended the sale, but the plates were bought in by the importers for $200. Mrs. Lohmeier said her firm had simply acted, in importing the goods, for the real purchaser, whose name he would not disclose.

Special Notices. When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria. When she became a Child, she cried for Castoria. When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria. When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

WHAT THE ABLEST CRITICS SAY.

"The Encyclopedic Dictionary is a library condensed into four volumes a ton of diffusiveness reduced to forty pounds of quietness."—Rev. Dr. Chas. H. Parkhurst, March 3, 1896. "It forms in itself a library for the busy man of affairs, the mechanic ambitious to advance himself in his line, or the student or apprentice just making a beginning."—Scientific American, August 3, 1895. "For general use it has no superior. Of great professional value to physicians, pharmacians, and lawyers."—Ex-Judge Noah Davis, March 12, 1895. "The work is undoubtedly an exceedingly useful and trustworthy one."—Sunday School Times, May 11, 1895. "It has all the utility of a superior unabridged dictionary, and all the practical usefulness of a dictionary without its diffusiveness."—Rain's Horn, November 16, 1895. "The skill and judgment with which the dictionary and encyclopedias have been handled can be appreciated only by comparing the Encyclopedic with other dictionaries."—Public Opinion, September 19, 1895.
